

Acknowledgments

This special issue has its roots in the international conference New Perspectives on Irish English 8 (NPIE8), held in 2024 and organized by the Center of Irish Studies in Cáceres. The conference was supported by the research project PID2019-106609GBI00, funded by the Ministerio de Ciencia, Innovación y Universidades (Spain) and by the European Union. The Irish Embassy in Madrid and the Vicerrectorado de Extensión Universitaria, Universidad de Extremadura, also contributed to the organization of this event.

NPIE 8 brought together scholars working on a variety of Irish English subjects, including contributions from areas that ranged from historical linguistics, dialectology, pragmatics, corpus linguistics, sociolinguistics and literary and media representation, among others. We are grateful to all the members of the organizing committee, the conference participants, and especially to the authors without whose innovative contributions this volume would not have been possible. Similarly, we warmly thank the blind reviewers for their constructive and rigorous feedback which has ensured the quality of this special issue.

We would also like to extend our heartfelt thanks to the Teanga Editorial Team, especially to Anne Marie Devlin for her constant guidance and support throughout the process and for the opportunity to edit this 40-year-anniversary volume.

Finally, we would like to express our deepest gratitude to Carolina P. Amador-Moreno for her continuous support, guidance and encouragement throughout the coordination and editing process. When she suggested co-editing this special issue to mark Teanga's 40 years of publications on Irish English, it felt like a timely project, especially given the journal's long-standing role in Applied Linguistics in Ireland. Her suggestion brought back an idea we had discussed at the New Perspectives on Irish English 5 conference (Potsdam, 2018). As our mentor and former supervisor, she kindly left the editorial credit in our hands, for which we are both very grateful. Thank you, Carolina, and thanks to all those involved in this volume.

To many more decades of Irish English studies in Teanga!
